

Biofidelic Instrumented Neck Surrogate (BINS)

For the experimental evaluation of the effectiveness of NECK BRACES, a Biofidelic Neck Surrogate was developed. It features a modular structure consisting of fundamental units of vertebrae (3D printed) and discs (made of silicon gel), capable of simulating the flexion properties of a biological neck.

The neck is instrumented to provide loads and flexion angles in both planes during an impact.

UNIVERSITÀ
DEGLI STUDI
DI PADOVA

[Zullo G., et al., 2025]

